

For my creative project, I painted roses on vintage records. Roses are a commonly used symbol in the cystic fibrosis community and a nod to the nickname “65 roses”. I intentionally picked the records based on how the song titles relate to the cystic fibrosis experience.

“Don’t Be Afraid” - Living with a chronic illness can be unnerving, especially during periods of heightened respiratory infection. While it is valid to be concerned, it is also important to prevent the worries from ruining your outlook on life.

“So Much To Live For” - Fighting towards a cure for cystic fibrosis gives so many people the opportunity to live long, successful, and fulfilling lives.

“All I Want is a Chance” - Advancements in pharmaceuticals and healthcare have given many people with cystic fibrosis a right that everyone deserves—health. It is crucial to keep the momentum progressing so everyone with CF can have this chance.
